

- Struggling with tee shirt and socks, I go sliding over to windows and open them wide.
- Leaning out, laughing, I waken a robin sitting so silently still in her nest.
- Leaping and laughing, I follow my nose to warm smells of bacon and syrup and coffee, to arms that hug tightly and welcome me in.
- Licking my fingers and listening to voices, I wriggle and squiggle and slide from my chair.
- Snuffling and smiling, they circle their mothers lying like puddings in thick chocolate sauce.
- Drying, I stand wrapped from nose-tip to toe-tips in thick, puffy towels that smell fresh from the line.
- Nodding and dozing, I curl in my chair.

Key:

"ing" verb

, comma

subject

- Struggling with tee shirt and socks, I go sliding over to windows and open them wide.
- Leaning out, laughing, I waken a robin sitting so silently still in her nest.
- Leaping and laughing, I follow my nose to warm smells of bacon and syrup and coffee, to arms that hug tightly and welcome me in.
- Licking my fingers and listening to voices, I wriggle and squiggle and slide from my chair.
- Snuffling and smiling, they circle their mothers lying like puddings in thick chocolate sauce.
- Drying, I stand wrapped from nose-tip to toe-tips in thick, puffy towels that smell fresh from the line.
- Nodding and dozing, I curl in my chair.

Key:

"ing" verb

, comma

subject