When exporting a PDF file you will have three different options; embed, flatten and ignore.

Choosing embed exports the PDF file exactly as it is and keeps any annotations editable. Choosing flattened merges all of your comments and annotations into the document. This makes them permanent and no longer editable but reduces file size. Choosing ignore, will strip your comments and annotations and only export a plain version of your PDF.

Comments and Annotations

ClaroPDF comes with a full set of commenting and annotation tools. Select the pencil icon to show the commenting toolbar. Using this toolbar you can highlight text, draw lines and shapes, add sticky notes, and insert pictures anywhere in your document.

The comments and annotations are compatible with Adobe Acrobat, GoodReader and many other PDF reading Applications.

For any text annotations you have created, you can have the content read back to you. Tapping the annotation will present the text-edit menu with an item labelled 'Speak'. Pressing this, will speak out the annotation's content with your current voice settings.

Exporting Comments and Annotations

You can export your comments and annotations two ways: as text (txt) or rich text (rtf) Exporting your annotations as text is a quick and easy way to capture and transfer your notes to another app. From the Annotations list, tap Export at the bottom, then choose Export as text. You choose to open the annotation text in another app or send it to Dropbox, Google Drive or OneDrive as a text file.
