The Faraway Seed

by Anna Boucaut, c2009

"This lovely little story is about a "perfect" forest that grew tall and proud on the land. The forest had a "sameness" about it that appeared comfortable until one day a bird from a faraway place flew over the forest and dropped a seed. The seed took root and a sapling grew and against all odds and adversity the tree grew tall and full and lush—it did not look like the other trees, it was not a forest tree. The other trees in the forest didn't like this "difference..." - Books.google.ca
